

What can I do with a Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy?

A guide compiled by CUE Career Services and the Faculty of Arts

General Skill Sets

A Bachelor of Arts degree is versatile. Graduates are employed in almost every industry and every company in North America. When employers are hiring, they are interested in transferable skills attained through university study. Examples include:

- Writing skills
- Research skills
- Preparation and facilitation of public presentation
- Skill in presenting yourself as a competent, articulate potential employee
- Accomplishing an outcome through working with a group (teamwork)
- The ability to start something and complete it (i.e. a university degree)
- A broad understanding of the history and framework of our society
- Knowledge and understanding of society and societal issues
- Knowledge and understanding of history and the development of culture in other countries and peoples
- Self-confidence
- Self-discipline
- The ability to communicate with anyone – anywhere; in any forum – using any format

Statistics tell us that university graduates are more likely to be promoted or to attain leadership positions than those who do not have a degree. Generally, they move into positions with increased responsibilities and increased pay, or they leave their current employer to take on a better-paying role elsewhere, as at this time, the degree is combined with work experience
